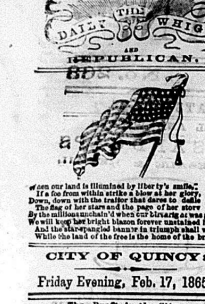
DAILY AND TRI WEEKLY WHIG AND REPUBLICAN.



of corn our land is illuminated by liberty's smile;
If a foe from within strike a blow at her glory,
Down, down with the traitor that dares do the deed!
The flag of her stars and the bars of her story
By the millions unchain'd shall wave o'er Liberty as we gain'd
We will keep her bright Union forever untarnished
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
While the last of the free is the home of the brave.

CITY OF QUINCY:

Friday Evening, Feb. 17, 1865.

The Draft in the City.

We are glad to learn that the plan of subscriptions recently adopted is working well, and that if a prompt and general effort is now made in its support, the city will be relieved from a draft. While every citizen has a general interest in the question, those liable to the draft are especially concerned, and their efforts should be as freely given and their subscriptions as liberally made as possible. A general meeting of citizens will be held at the court room to-morrow evening, and we earnestly hope that such a united action of all interested will be the result as to determine at once the fact that the quota of the city will be filled by enlistments. To do this the means must be provided. They can be furnished, and if all do their duty, they will be. A few of our citizens are hard at work. Let them be sustained by a cheerful co-operation from all. Now is the time, before the wheel starts.

The Legislature to be Paid in Gold.

We find elsewhere the final action of the House of Representatives on the appropriation bill, the proceedings on which are given by our Springfield correspondent up to the point of the assumed defeat of the bill. We hardly know which most to admire, the innocent simplicity in legislative rules which permits the rejection of a bill once passed, without first reconsidering the vote passing it, or the inscrutable strategy which, under such peculiar circumstances, adopts an amendment for the purpose of subsequently killing it by rejecting the whole bill. When the House receded from its amendment, after having passed the bill, there was most clearly an end to the controversy. The bill was passed as it came from the Senate, and the only way to reach it was by a reconsideration of the vote passing it within the time prescribed by the rules.

But all doubt, if any could exist, was afterwards removed by a formal reconsideration of the vote rejecting the bill, and then deliberately passing it in full accordance with legislative usage. The vote in the final proceedings was as follows:

Yeas—Barrett, Benson, Burnett, Childs, Cook, of Woodford, Cooper, Decius, Leickman, Dolton, Gobble, Hill, Hopkins, Hundley, Jackson, James, of Monroe, Kelley, Lathrop, Logan, Looney, McDonald, McIntyre, Middlesworth, Miller, of LaSalle, Miller, of Logan, Miller, of Richland, Miller, of Washington, Monroe, Morrill, Morse, Murphy, Neece, Niles, Patton, Randall, Redmond, Saltonstall, Sharon, Shelby, Simmons, Spink, Springer, Stephenson, of Cook, Ward, Welsh, Wood, Yeargain.—46.

Nays—Bond, Bryant, Burchard, Cook, of Cook, Corwin, Dame, Dresser, Ford, Henderson, Jones, Joslyn, Lloyd, Martin, Mann, Paine, Platt, Pugh, Smith, Stacy, Strong, Thomas, Tincher, and Mr. Speaker.—24.

In commenting on the adjournment the Legislature yesterday we remarked that the members might console themselves with the reflection that they were no worse, if they were no better than the members of other legislative bodies. We now desire to modify this remark, by giving most of them the credit of being a little worse than the generality of those who wear legislative honors. For cold-blooded selfishness and purely personal legislation this act of doubling 'their own pay, simply because they happen to be invested with the power to do so, and leaving everybody else uncared for, transcends any other we can call to mind. The original proposition had at least the merit of including other public officers with themselves,; but the bill as now passed has no redeeming trait of generosity, or diffusion of a public wrong among the participators, as the reader may choose to regard it. Every candidate for the legislature accepted a nomination and every member was elected with a full knowledge of the pay he was to receive, with the additional fact that the difference between gold and paper was greater then than now. United States currency was then, as now, a legal tender for everything except custom house dues. Taxes, debts, salaries, were and are all payable in paper, and what peculiar merit there has been in the services of the one hundred and ten members of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois to justify the separation of themselves from every other class of the community for special remuneration is not altogether evident. It would be a just, if not a legal, conclusion of this business, for the state treasurer to tender to the honorable members their constitutional per diem in the legal currency of the country, and if they refuse to receive it, let them go to the courts for their discredited annuity, and if they refuse to receive it, let them go to the courts for their discredited annuity acquired "rights."

THE CONTRAST.—The Great Napoleon, it will be remembered, once met the Emperor of Russia and the King of Prussia upon a raft moored in the centre of the river Nieman, a little below the town, June 25th, 1807, and here signed the Treaty of Tilsit, which put an end to a long and bloody war. But, alas, for Napoleon's consummate injustice. The one was a complete success—the other an entire failure. Whose fault was it?—Herald.

The one was a complete success, eh?—Prussia lied, by that treaty nearly two thirds of its possessions. The great arch traitor Davis and all the little traitors would have called a similar treaty a complete success. But the contrast is Prussia lay at the feet of Buonaparte; but now the traitors lay at the feet of Father Abraham. HERDY.

Mendelssohn's beautiful song, "It is ordained in God's counsel," has been made into a polka, and published at Prague.

The Pitman Lease.

The following is the testimony of Mr. James Lowe, of this city, before the penitentiary committee, as we find it in the correspondence of the Chicago Tribune. Mr. Lowe was the clerk of Mr. Pitman, and the enrolling and engrossing clerk of the senate, while the lease bill was pending before the legislature:

Q. State what you may know, if anything, in regard to improper or corrupt influences being used by any person or persons toward members of the legislature of 1863 to secure the passage of what is commonly known as the Pitman Penitentiary Lease Bill?

A. I know from admissions made to me by James M. Pitman, during the session, that he had to employ a considerable amount of money to members, in order to procure the passage of the bill.

Q. State for what purpose he said he had used the money?

A. From general conversation had with Mr. Pitman during the pending of the bill, he gave me to understand that he had to pay certain members to vote for the passage of the bill.

R. State what you may know, if anything, in regard to any contracts with or combinations between said Pitman, or any other person, for the purpose of securing the passage of said bill?

A. During the pending of the bill, I remarked to Mr. Pitman, on several occasions, that I thought Dr. Ira A. W. Buck, then Penitentiary Commissioner, was lobbying against the lease bill. Mr. Pitman assured me that he had nothing to fear from him (Buck) as he was interested in the passage of the bill. I made the remark to him about the then lessee, Samuel K. Casey, and Samuel A. Buckmaster, then Speaker of the House of Representatives, and he gave me distinctly to understand that he had nothing to fear from either of them—that they were interested in the lease with him.

Mr. Lowe further testifies to the transfer of the lease from Hendricks and Casey to Pitman & Co., or rather to James M. Pitman, as follows:

I remember that the bill of sale was from Casey and Hendricks to James M. Pitman, and the articles of co partnership, for carrying on the Penitentiary business, were signed by James M. Pitman, Samuel K. Casey, Samuel A. Buckmaster, and Ira A. W. Buck. The first transfer from Casey and Hendrick was to Pitman alone, because the parties named did not want their connection with the partnership known. This fact I had from Mr. Pitman."

The correspondent of the Tribune appends to this testimony the remark that "It is due to Capt. Pitman to say, that in his testimony, he positively denies ever having paid or ever employed money or any other means for consideration, to get the lease bill through; but that money was thus employed, there can hardly be a doubt, by some of the party. It seems to be fastened on Casey more surely than any other man. He is not now in the State."

[Special Correspondence of the Whig & Republican.]

Matters at the State Capitol.

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 15, 1865.

Both Houses held a night session last night, but no business was done amounting to anything, for both (as Artemas Ward would say) "went into the ab. biness." The Democracy got factious on a bill disfranchising those who had claimed alienage to escape the draft, and both sides soon went into fun. I said in my first letter that the Adams county members would not cut a very large figure in this assembly, and if they did, I would report it. I am happy to say that Mr. Yeargan last night cut a very large figure. While other representatives having a good time, and about fifty members on the floor, all talking, he said, 'Mr. Speaker, I raise to a point of order. The body said, "make it a quart." Mr. Yeargain said, "You may laugh, but I represent an intelligent constituency, and they should be shocked to see such action. I think it a disgrace to belong to such a body." Somebody cried out, "leave it then," and he thereupon moved to adjourn, and lost. Taking his hat he cut a very large figure. While other representatives having a good time, and about fifty members on the floor, all talking, he said, 'Mr. Speaker, I raise to a point of order. The body said, "make it a quart." Mr. Yeargain said, "You may laugh, but I represent an intelligent constituency, and they should be shocked to see such action. I think it a disgrace to belong to such a body." Somebody cried out, "leave it then," and he thereupon moved to adjourn, and lost. Taking his hat he said, "I am going home anyhow." But a call of the House was pending, the doors were closed, and the door keeper would not allow him to go out. Mr. Yeargain, from that time, 'Mr. Speaker, he won't let me out." We have seen a great many amusing times in the Illinois Legislature, but never have I seen such a scene or laughed so much as I did last night. The most dignified could not contain themselves, and Mr. Yeargan, before he got through, was obliged to give in and laugh with the rest.

Speaking of curious things, the editor of the Herald came over a few days since, and could find no place at the hotel to sleep except with one of the strongest "Black Republicans," as he called him, from Quincy. He, to every one's surprise, was up very early next morning, and when asked the reason, he said, "I got up to see if he had turned black," and was certain he had not. The Republican gentleman, (an old time Douglasite Democrat in Quincy) as the result of this strange association, feared that he had turned "black democrat," and should say harsh words or make any change in either of them they will know the reason.

The House, true to its former action, this morning laid the "gold clause" in the Senate appropriation bill on the table. The Senate refused to agree to the House amendment, and sent it back. On a motion of Mr. Morrill to recede from this amendment, it was lost, the vote being ayes 33, nays 41. A committee of conference was then appointed to confer with a committee of the Senate to arrange the disagreement. The committee reported that the House should adhere to its amendment. The question in the Senate came up, and the Senate refused to recede from its action. Finally, the House receded from its amendment by yeas 39 to nays 36. Then upon the final passage of the bill it was lost by yeas 33, nays 45. This is hard upon clerks, employees and members, but the House is vindicated itself and sustained its dignity, and those members who voted against this bill in opposition to their pockets ought to and will be honored by their constituents and the people throughout the State. The Senate is responsible for this bill by persisting in hitching on the "gold clause." I understand that it is claimed that the last vote taken was not necessary, as the House, by receding, having unconditionally passed the bill, passed a law. I cannot say what will be the decision yet. It is a nice question of law, and will have to be decided there.

The following bills, of interest to the citizens of Quincy, have passed both Houses in addition to those already reported:

A bill for an act to incorporate the Evangelical Protestant Widows, and Orphans' Aid Society of Quincy.

A bill for an act to incorporate the Quincy and Pinfield, McAdams or Telford Road Company.

A bill for an act to incorporate the Quincy Independent German School Association.

A bill to incorporate the Adams county Railroad Company.

A bill for an act to incorporate the Ancient Order of Druids, Grand Quarters at Quincy.

ALERT.

CALICO.—Calico is so called from a city in India, and has been manufactured in Hindostan from time immemorial. The first importation was made by the East India Company in 1761, and the printing commenced in London in 1676. In consequence of the hostility of Spitalfields silk weavers, the importation of Indian calicoes was prohibited in England in 1700, and in 1721 it was made illegal to wear any printed calico whatever. Laws, customs, and manufactures are somewhat different, however, at the present time.

The Philadelphia Press says in reference to the oil fever: "We are now in the sifting time. In a hundred days we shall probably see one-half the petroleum companies disappear. Probably it will be a smash, and somebody get hurt."

The Troy Times says it doubts if any city in the State, outside of the metropolis, contains a greater number of bounty jumpers than Troy. Last summer they were in pecuniar kind of hat as a badge of their 'purfession.' They even had a dance, and actually issued cards entitled 'Bounty Jumper's Ball.'

Gurney, the English millionaire, whose death has been noticed, left property, real and personal, to the amount of $20,000,000. Notwithstanding his great reputation, while living, as a philanthropist, his charitable bequests amounted to only about $25,000. The rest goes to his rich relations.

The last will and testament of a shop keeper of the Rue De Denis in Paris, who died recently, ended thus: "I desire my heirs to take measures at once for my autopsy, and to place my body in the hands of men of science, that it may be carefully dissected, for I am determined to know the cause of my death."

A man came to the Duke of Wellington—"What have you to offer?" "A bullet-proof jacket, your grace. "Put it on." The invention didn't take. The Duke rang a bell. "Tell the captain of the guard to order one of the men to lead with ball and cartridge." The inventor disappeared, and was never seen again except in a dream. His money was wasted in trying that invention.

The seal of the rebel States is described in the English newspapers. It is designed by Palmer, the celebrated English sculptor, and contains a Corinthian column surmounted by Crawford's statue of Washington. This is surrounded by a wreath composed of the most noted products of the South, including cotton, rice, Indian corn, cotton, wheat and sugarcane. The rim bears the legend, "The Confederate States of America, 22d of February, 1862. Deo vindice." The seal is of silver, and its diameter is four inches.

It is a treat to see Prudery get into an omnibus. Of course she rejects the hand held out by the conductor, and gets in like a cat through a squeeze. Neither does she take the first vacant seat; but looks for a seat, if possible, between an innocent little girl and an old woman. In the course the omnibus moves, Prudery totters—makes a snatch at Civility's nose or his neck, or anywhere—and, missing, recoils, rebounds to the other side of the vehicle, and plumps down in a strange gentleman's lap. True modesty would have escaped all these indecencies.

[For the Whig and Republican.]

"That Reminds Me of a Little Story."

The papers furnish an account of the late pacific interview between the President and the rebel commissioners Stephens, Hunter and Campbell—all, but that "little story" Uncle Abe was reminded of, and which called forth a hearty laugh from the commissioners. Every one seems anxious to hear that little story. On opening the subject Stephens spoke of the letter of instructions from Davis, in which he expressed his desire to restore peace to the people of "the confederate," to which Uncle Abe responded with the story of a farmer of his sincere desire to restore peace to "the people of our common country"—and here the story comes in:

Said Uncle Abe: This reminds me of a little story. A farmer, down in Sangamon county, had one of the little darkies on the farm, who was the eldest son of Gen. H——, and was a self-important little fellow. The darkies had taken to feeding their pigs with corn in the ear, and had always noticed that the pigs overcame all opposition to his royal will, by his fractious and reckless violence. "Fred is King," he would boastingly declare, in the pride of his triumphs. They had a barrel of new cider, and Fred having taken several drinks, Mrs. H. had forbidden him to have any more till next day. About bed time there arose a terrible noise in the nursery, upsetting chairs, breaking pitchers, locking-glasses, windows, &c., &c.; and Mrs. H. hurrying into the nursery found Fred undressed, but with the tongs in hand smashing things generally, and swearing he wouldn't go to bed till he had another drink of cider. She snatched him up unawares, and turning him on her lap, tickling his catastrophy, with fast and furious manipulations till she brought it to a cherry-red; and then telling him he should not have any more cider, ordered him to bed, and retired. Now, Master Fred was decidedly in a fix. He was stunned—he was bewildered. What was he to do? To yield and give in was to lose the prestige of his royal supremacy—his sceptre would be broken—his power gone. And then, too, the little niggers were grinning in undisguised glee at his discomfiture. But, on the other hand, if he persisted his mother would certainly light on him again with that terrible spanking process, under which he was no smarting and fancying he felt blisters rising. What shall he do? He has it—his face brightens with a sudden idea. He calls for a glass of water—sips it—sips it again, and then drinks it all down,—then drawing a long breath, and looking slowly round with an air of satisfaction and triumph, he exclaims, "That tastes just like cider—and now I am ready for bed." His mother overheard him, and quick as thought she had him on her lap again. "No sir," she said, "no sir! it is not cider! and it don't taste like cider! and you must go to bed, too!"

Just at this point the commissioners burst out in a fit of laughter, so that I could not hear the conclusion of the little story; but I could see Uncle Abe's right arm vibrating rapidly in significant gesticulation, as he finished it. ASMODEUS.

THE REBEL PLAN.—The New York World's Washington correspondent has intelligence confirming the report that Richmond would be evacuated under certain contingencies, and that the new military policy of the rebels was to give up all seaboard cities almost without a struggle. He says Lee accepted the position of Commander-in-Chief on the written pledge that the military policy he will hit advocate should be carried out. This includes the plan of evacuating all posts near the Atlantic coast and concentrating the troops of the Confederacy at one or more points further inland. The rebel armies in the Southwest and Trans-Mississippi. The Southern forces will be concentrated into two large armies, viz: One in Eastern Virginia, under the direct control of Lee, and another in South Carolina, under Beauregard. It is designed to fall upon Sherman with the whole force, and if successful in destroying his army, to attack Grant in the same way.

NATIONAL FINANCES.

U. S. 7-30 LOAN.
By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned has assumed the General Subscription Agency for the sale of U. S. Treasury Notes bearing seven and three-tenths per cent. interest, per annum, known as the SEVEN-THIRTY LOAN.
These notes are issued under date of August 19th, 1864, and are payable in one years from that time, in currency or are convertible at the option of the holder into
U. S. 5-20 Six per cent. GOLD-BEARING BONDS.
These bonds are now worth a premium of nine per cent., including gold interest from Nov., which makes the actual profit on the 7-30 loan, at current rates, including interest, about ten per cent. per annum, besides its exemption from State and municipal taxation, which adds from one to three per cent. more, according to the rate levied on other property. The interest is payable semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker.
The interest amounts to
One cent per day on a $50 note.
Two cents " " " $100 "
Ten " " " $500 "
Twenty " " " $1000 "
Forty " " " $2000 "
One Hundred " " " $5000 "
Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions. This is The Only Loan in Market
now offered by the Government, and it is confidently expected that its superior advantages will make it the GREAT POPULAR LOAN OF THE PEOPLE.
Less than $300,000,00 remain unsold, which will probably be disposed of within the next 60 or 90 days, when the note will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans.
In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country are generally agreed to receive subscriptions at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in which they have confidence; and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.
JAY COOKE,
Subscription Agent, Philadelphia
Subscriptions will be received by the First National Bank of Quincy,
Merchants & Farmers National Bank OF QUINCY.
Payment of Coupons
ON THE
7 3-10 Treasury Notes.
THE COUPONS ON THESE NOTES, MATURING on the 15th inst., will be paid on presentation at the counter of this Bank.
